From the Archives

Western Pacific's first roadswitcher, GP7 701, waits for an assignment at the Williams Street Yard in San Jose. Once a busy feeder for the WP, the line has become a shadow of its former self since the merger. Recently, through service on the branch ended and most of it has been abandoned and taken up. Only the Milpitas Yard and a few miles of line running south are still in service, along with two isolated spurs in San Jose, now connected to ex-SP lines.

Mission Statement

"The Feather River Rail Society is dedicated to the preservation, interpretation and education of the public, as to the history and people of the Western Pacific Railroad."

Mission Goals

To preserve and interpret the history of the WP, the "Willing People" as a vital link in the development of the rail industry on the West Coast, including the steam and diesel evolution, WP's influence in the passenger tourism industry, the impact of freight competition between neighboring railroads. WP's influence in the lumber, mining and agriculture industry from Plumas County throughout California, Nevada and Utah.
